

“Kavi Sammellan 2012”

An initiative by Literary Club RDIAS

Topic :	Kavi Sammellan for the students of BBA,MBA and MCA
Date of event :	January 25, 2012
Aim of the Event :	Aim of this event was expression, expression and expression! Writing a poem or a kavita is a wonderful outlet for expressing oneself. Poetry can be used to convey ideas, information and feelings but, above all, it is a great means of entertainment. It includes imagination and imagery, making good use of rhythm, rhyme and tone. We believe that poetry is one way of telling the truth, a way often superior to others. If you ask us why.... one argument goes back to Aristotle, to his famous distinction between history and poetry. History reports what happened and is therefore subject to all the constraints and imperfections of actual life. Poetry uses words in their fuller potential, and creates representations that are more complete and meaningful than nature can give us in the raw. The aim of this event was to recreate the magic of yesteryears wherein the connoisseurs of art get together to create an environment where everyone recites, appreciates and encourages poetry. Wah Wah!!!

Event Report in brief :	The event lasted two hours and was witness to an overzealous crowd which had to be controlled in a poetic manner, ofcourse! There were twenty registered entries and many more mushroomed in the course of the event. Hormones and motivational factors were running high! The event was anchored by Ms. Geetika Virmani and Ms. Shruti Yaksh, students of MBA IV. They were solely responsible for steering the event, creating magic with their style and charm, expediting the event when the contenders took their own sweet time, applauding the speakers and managing the entire show with élan! Mehak of MBAIV stood first with her creation titled “Kya hai mahatv”? She was followed by Sudhanshu Sharma of MBA IV who pelted out the witty “Ex-Girlfriend” creation. He was also the one who was asked to recite the poem again while the judges were compiling the result; his kavita scored the highest in the area of popular choice. Shauib, student of MBA II, spoke with the style and tone of a poet and his creation “Mahanagar ki bus” was very relevant to the current political system and society at large. The event is looked forward to by the students and undoubtedly the platform for this form of expression, provided by the institute, goes a long way in creating a sense of enrichment and self worth amongst the students.
