Personality Development Session

Topic :	Personality Development Session for students of MBA IV Semester
Month :	February 13, 2012
Aim of the Event	Personality development sessions are the path for analysis, reflection and action of various activities which ultimately enable the students to achieve success in their life. This session was build on with this objective in mind.
Description of the event	The session started with the discussion on team building and its importance followed by a story of "Hare & Tortoise". The reason was to enable the student to analyze their individual competencies and to utilize them in a team to achieve best results during their career life. This was followed by a psychometric test run on students by the instructor, which would let us know what others perceive of us. Through these tests, we can also assist our students in precise job profiling prior to interview. This will help to identify the key skills and abilities required for a particular job.
