| Topic : | Simulation of HR Mock Interview Session for students of MBA Semester IV |
| Month & Date : | January 20, 2012 |
| Aim of the Activity | Mock Interview is an emulation of an interview scenario used primarily for training purposes. It is to prepare the students for actual interview experience, to learn what is expected of them and how they can improve on themselves. Striving for all round development of our students, RDIAS had arranged personal interviews of MBA students in order to judge their HR credibility and their behavior competencies. |
| Description of the event | Interviews were taken by faculty specializing in finance and students were asked questions related to introduction, team handling and situation handling which would help the faculty to understand the personality, communication and strengths of the students. Students were then evaluated on behaviour competencies which include parameters like, communication skills, team playing abilities, body language, physical appearance, self development, initiative taking ability etc. The main idea behind this session was to help them visualize their career path and instil in them a strong sense of direction and focus related to their work. Students were given individual feedback related to their performance in the interview and suggestions on to how to answer various questions in the actual interview was also given by the expert. |
