

“Khelo Eco Friendly Holi”

Topic :	Khelo Eco Friendly Holi!
Date of event :	18 March , 2011
Aim of the Event	The main objective of Holi is to bring people from different walks of life together, to welcome every one with open arms and to forget the overall differences between one and another. The true flavour of this occasion lies in its spirit of brotherhood, love and austerity.
Description of the event	Holi, the festival of colors, is one of the important festivals in India that celebrates the return of spring. It symbolises burning of bad practices. The colors used in Holi festival are mostly synthetic and harmful to the health as well to the environment. Thus, the Holi festival adds an additional burden to our already fragile environment. RDIAS was fortunate to celebrate natural and eco friendly Holi festival...like each year. The members of the organisation offered their holi wishes in the “Barsana style” by applying “Chandan Ka Teeka” to each other and playing with jingling flowers. Everyone was treated with a round of ‘Gujiya’ as well. RDIAS supported and participated in this programme so as to encourage the use of natural colours and colourful flowers, instead of chemicals and synthetic colours. Holi re holi!!!
