“Tree Plantation: A Social Club Activity”

Topic :	Tree Plantation Activity by Social Club, RDIAS
Date of event :	February 8,2011
Aim of the Event :	The importance of trees in purifying the air, maintaining ecological balance, preventing soil erosion, use as ingredient in medicines, habitat for faunal species, providing nutrients to the soil etc. is well known. Having already set the precedent of being a member of the Eco Club, RDIAS took yet another step in the direction of resurrecting greenery by creating a new garden area with 200 saplings within the campus.
Event Report in brief:	Without trees, flowers and vegetation, the urban dwellers life is prone to melancholia and depression. Trees offer greenery and green is the color of prosperity and growth! Having a well laid out and immaculately trimmed garden adds to the aesthetic beauty of the campus. Besides this, plants and trees are effective sound barriers, offer shade and a cool environment to students in the scorching heat ...coupled with a relaxing atmosphere for exchange of ideas between teachers and students. RDIAS aims at Total Quality Management and the Tree Plantation activity contributed in this direction by making the campus more conducive for learning. Director General RDIAS, Col. Mahander

Singh, Faculty Members and students of all courses came collectively and participated in this event with a great sense of involvement.

After all:

"Environment education cannot be confined to plants and animals or even conservation; its aim must be to open to students the interconnectedness between living and non-living things in space as well as time."

The Social Club at RDIAS has done exactly this!
